Introduction:

Man and woman are two pillars of the social structure. Their roles, duties and rights are complementary and supplementary towards each other. If one of the pillars is weak, the other cannot bear the burden of society and the whole structure of the society shall collapse. Man should not exploit, the woman. But ironically, it has happened and goes on happening. The present society is still under the impression of age-old dogma that woman is inferior to man. The wrong interpretation of religion has weakened the woman's position in the society. Wrong customs, which are derogatory to the position of women are still followed. Taking advantage of these factors man has created a very strong position to himself over the woman in all spheres of life, including social, cultural, political, economic etc. woman has been at the receiving and right from her home to working place. As a result, human rights of women have been violated and crimes against women are on the rise. Keeping in view these facts, all customs, in every society which are derogatory to women should be declared illegal immediately. Some of them are, religious prostitution, polygamy by man and property rights of women.

One of the burning problems of the women world is the right relating to property. The topic of 'Women's Right to Property' has been recently developed into a broad filed of Research, in women's property Rights, social scenario & Human Rights. The status of women has advanced in some respects But that respect progress still unsatisfactory and amounts to inequality between women, and men and have persisted a major obstacles remain, with serious consequences for the well being of all people. This unequal situation increasing poverty and affecting the lives of the inhabitants of the world, in particular women, are facing both on the national and International levels.

Concept:

The term Human Rights has been recognized and proclaimed by United Nations General Assembly through the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948. Human Rights means Right of Human being relating to life, liberty, equality and dignity of the individual which have been guaranteed by the international covenants. Human Rights in the present era were known as natural rights of natural person in ancient period. The natural right theory expressed by John Locke, believes that naturally the individual possesses basic human rights inherent to his personality, independent of whether these rights are recognized or not by any ruler. Human Right are intrinsic to the human personality. These individual human rights are primordial and not a favour given or granted to him by the ruler or society.
